Students enrolled in industrial programs at Kentucky Tech-Belfry Area Technology Center will benefit with new supplies and equipment because of two $500 donations made by CAM Mining LLC.

Principal Annette Harris recently welcomed new CAM president Christopher Moravec and William May, human resources director, to her school for tours and an overview of program offerings. The visit allowed Moravec to personally meet instructors and see firsthand what skills students are learning in their program areas.

“We are very pleased with the level of training provided by the Belfry staff and hope this donation can in some small way help,” said May.

“Supply donations are put to good use by instructors who help students develop the technical skills necessary to become employed,” said Harris. “The donation was very much appreciated because of the continued need for supplies and equipment to operate our programs – especially in these tough economic times.”

According to Harris, May serves on the Electrical Program Advisory Committee and is a member of the school’s Steering Committee.

“Mr. May’s support and involvement have been very beneficial in our efforts to stay abreast of new technology and industry requirements,” said Harris. “Additionally, he has actively engaged in assisting with the hiring of graduates from our Coal Academy programs. The cooperative partnership has been a win-win situation for all of us.”
